

Tongue River at State Line, Montana, February 2004. The continuous specific-conductance monitor is installed underwater and inside the white plastic pipe. The electronic equipment for storing and transmitting data is in the gage house on the right.